OFFERED HEADS TO SULTAN

Unusual infraction of Mohammedan Etiquette Explained to Satisfaction of Russian Ambassador.

The importance of Adrianople for the Turks has largely been a strategic one—mingled with the sentiment they feel for it as the first city of any size they captured in Europe, and the seat of one of the most famous of their mosques. The author of "The Revolt of a City" was probably an Oriental forerunner of our own western town boosters. Still, the fact remains that even after the fall of Constantinople the place continued to be a favorite resort of the sultans. Adrianople had something besides war to talk about in 1867, for instance, when the ambassadors of Austria, France, Persia, Poland and Ragusa came to present the respects of their governments to the newly succeeded son of Suleiman the Magnificent. The Persian was the last to arrive. When he made his state entrance into the city he was met by the Turkish authorities and by the other ambassadors and their suites. He was astounded by the fact that these last took off their hats as he passed, it being a serious breach of etiquette for a Mohammedan to uncover his head in public, and he demanded an explanation of the extraordinary gesture. The master of ceremonies, a famous poet and wit of his time called Shems Pasha, told him that the Christian ambassadors thereby signified their willingness to leave their heads at the feet of Sultan Selim II.—H. G. Dwight, in Harper's Magazine.

HIS AUDIENCE WELL IN HAND

Member of British Parliament, With "Gift of Gab," All His Own, Reigned Supreme.

When Mr. Gibson Bowles was in the British house of commons he was never pedantic or dull, despite the fact that he was reputed to breakfast off Blue-books. If anyone started a point in connection with naval matters, there was "Cap'n Bowles" ready to make him look foolish. Mr. Mundella once tried his hand and got more than he expected. "Suppose," thundered Mr. Bowles across the house at the astonished Mr. Mundella, "the right honorable gentleman were at sea in heavy weather close hauled"—then followed a complicated problem of naval tactics. What Mr. Mundella would have done under the circumstances remained a mystery. What he did under Mr. Bowles' interrogations was to sit silent and look gloomy. Sir William Harcourt once solemnly complained that Mr. Bowles had called him a political Mr. Stiggins. "The right honorable gentleman will pardon me," replied Mr. Bowles. "He is not correct. I called him an inflated Mr. Stiggins!"—Manchester Guardian.

Pictures for Passports.

"Quick deliveries made for passport purposes" is the sign which is likely to appear in every photographer's window, a New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch writes. Several large firms in this city report that during the last year they have made nice sums of money from this special department. If you contemplate traveling abroad it is well to know that before you can get a passport you must provide three unmounted photographs of yourself on thin paper, with light backgrounds. These have to be affixed to the passport and the duplicates. New York's first passport office is located near Trinity church. The office is almost large enough to accommodate half a dozen persons at one time. The waiting line sometimes extends down the corridor to the elevator.

Geological Data.

A strange fact, and one of the greatest scientific significance, is that all the mollusks of the western mountain regions of the United States show in a most marked degree a closer relationship to the mollusca of Asia than that of the eastern portion of the United States, which, coupled with the fact that this is also true of some of the mammals of the Western states, gives great weight to the theory that there once existed a land bridge between Asia and the continent of North America, and that the Eastern and Western United States were divided by a large inland sea.

Couldn't Trust Grandson.

Mande Fulton, the clever actress, has a fund of anecdotes, and here's one of the best among them: "She had stopped, panting, by the road to rest. It was the shell road in Pass Christian, and she was black. Beside her was a heavy market basket filled to overflowing. A passerby smiled and she responded with a full and free confidence. 'Yass'm, I is some tired. An' lame. All painful wid' miseries. Yass'm I coulda done sen' someone else to mahket fo' me. Mah grandson he coulda gone. But I didn't trust him. He spends mah money too briffly.'"—Young's Magazine.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Cline arrived home from Knoxville on the early train Sunday morning. Mrs. Cline was operated upon and is much improved although she has not fully regained her strength. Mr. Cline was subjected to a very searching examination and there are prospects that he will be very much benefited, if not cured, by the treatment that has been prescribed, but he will not be able to attend fully to the duties of his office, that of register of deeds, for some time. They were accompanied by the sister of Mrs. Cline, Miss Lois Lindsay, of Illinois, who was with them for some time in Knoxville. ### CARD OF THANKS.

To the people of Crossville who so kindly assisted us in every way possible in the sickness and death of H. C. Bandy, we the Bandy family, wish to try to express our thanks and appreciation. Never have we been so deeply impressed with the goodness of our people. We find that words utterly fail to express our gratitude. We would like to make special mention of many lovable deeds done, but for fear we may fail to mention some that justly deserve mentioning we will mention only one that he enjoyed so much. That was the kindness of Herman Hendley bringing the flowers for him each morning; his favorite flower which he enjoyed having so much. Again we wish to thank you.

The Bandy families.
